The Never-Trump neocon Super pac is reeling from allegations of sexual misconduct, cover up, infighting over principles and general all-around “creepy-ass motherfucker” behavior.

> The accusations have roiled the organization, and as its current and former employees and contractors began coming forward to discuss them, they described a workplace where women in key positions were sidelined and where sexist and homophobic language was used by those in leadership posts. Nearly all of them said they feared speaking publicly about their experiences with the Lincoln Project and its remaining co-founders. Many cited leaders’ tendency to “go nuclear,” as several put it, when faced with internal dynamics that could undermine the public image they cultivated with their liberal fans. The interviews depict an organization that grew quickly, with little planning at its inception, then began to spiral out of control as its founders quarreled over the organization’s direction, finances, tactics and even who would own the donor data that the project eventually would amass.

Weaver himself has since been accused of sexual misconduct with a second teenager boy who has come forward.

> Weaver is accused of ‘aggressively sexually harassing’ the minor on social media. He further claimed that Weaver often contacted ‘kids and young men’ through Twitter and offer them jobs and internships ‘in exchange for sexual favors’. The bombshell allegation came just hours after the Lincoln Project shut down its fundraising page and announced it would be releasing staff from their NDAs. Some of the leaders of the embattled Lincoln Project knew about sexual harassment allegations against co-founder John Weaver as early as March, multiple sources, including the group’s former executive director, told The 19th late Monday.

Kudos to Girdusky for releasing this information, as going up against power is what journalists are supposed to do. This is a huge problem with self-righteous people who see problems where they don’t exist or are mad that someone is corrupt in the wrong way. CNN republicans, the types who run the LP, didn’t hate Trump because he was an actual fascist or some other dumb reason. They despised Trump because he gave no shits when he spoke, berated his enemies without mercy, when you’re supposedly to politely take it in the butt, and refused to start World War III with Russia.

In other words, they wanted him to be George Bush and he wound up being Jeb Bush with a hilarious twitter account, minus starting more wars. The Lincoln Project should be ashamed of themselves and be investigated criminally. Anyone who turned the other way in defense of Weaver should be charged and Weaver himself without question. Any less is a miscarriage of justice, which the LP has been lecturing us was the real danger of Trump.
